

STATE REFUSES TO REPAIR STATE ROAD
DESPITE URGENT PLEAHighway Department Writes
"There is a Lack of Funds"

AREA IS ISOLATED

Fire Apparatus is Hampered
In Responding To Alarms

Despite the almost impassable conditions and the petitioning of residents of Croydon for the improvement of State Road, between Croydon and Bristol, the State Highway Department has absolutely refused to improve that highway and has stated that lack of funds make it impossible to proceed with the work.

Bus service has been discontinued over State Road because of its deep ruts, holes, and otherwise dangerous condition, for motor vehicles and residents of Croydon are being compelled to walk to the Bristol Pike. In many instances they are taking short-cuts over the tracks of the P. R. R., and thus endangering their lives. Firemen claim that they are seriously hampered in responding to alarms, due to the condition of State Road and thus additional danger faces that section.

Letter after letter, petition after petition, and appeal after appeal has been made to the State Highway Department, to improve State Road, so that bus service can be resumed and that travel over this main thoroughfare will be safe for the traveling public. But all of these have been of no avail. Croydon residents, for many weeks, during the winter, were practically isolated because of the condition of the roadway.

A few days ago it was decided to make one more strong and urgent appeal to the State Highway Department but in the reply received, it was stated "our funds are taxed to the very limit and no funds are in sight for construction work of this type."

This lack of funds is almost unbelievable in the face of the huge amounts which are being spent on many needless projects.

The following petition signed by 212 residents of Croydon, many of them property owners, of that community as well as of Bristol Park, which is located between Croydon and Bristol, was sent to the Highway Department:

To the Honorable Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of Highways, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

We, the undersigned, residents and tax payers of Bucks County, respectfully present:

1. The highway known as State Road running between Croydon, Bucks County, Pa., and Bristol, Pa., is in a dangerous and impassable condition.

2. The said State Road is approximately three miles long and has a stone surface.

3. There are approximately eight thousand people in the vicinity who desire to but cannot, at present, use the highway due to its condition.

4. The only other means of getting between Croydon and Bristol is by way of Bristol Pike which runs parallel and at a distance of one mile from the said State Road and is separated by the main trunk of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, running between Philadelphia and New York.

5. Between Croydon and Bristol, a distance of three miles, there is only one means of crossing the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and that is an overhead foot bridge, located approximately halfway between Croydon and Bristol.

6. The community of Croydon supports twenty businesses and stores.

7. School children journeying to and from school cannot use the said State Road and are compelled to either use the aforesaid overhead foot bridge about one mile distant or trespass across the tracks of the railroad.

8. There are no lights on the said State Road.

9. The said State Road, being impassable to all traffic, has necessitated the discontinuance of Bus Service

TELLS OF SOLDIERS
BURIED IN BUCKS COUNTYThere Are Approximately
3,000 Buried in 131
Cemeteries

DATA IS INTERESTING

There are approximately 3000 soldiers dead in 131 cemeteries and graveyards in Bucks County, according to William H. Murphy, Bristol, who served as registrar of soldier graves in locating these burial places and making a complete register of the veterans and their histories.

During the time that Mr. Murphy was engaged in this work he uncovered some very interesting inscriptions on gravestones, including: "As you are now so once was I, as I am now so you will be. Prepare for death and follow me."

One of the points made by Mr. Murphy who addressed the Doylestown Rotary Club Wednesday night, was that when the registration was made of the soldiers' graves, many of the cemeteries were in a deplorable condition. As the result of the publicity given this fact, all but one of them have been improved, one at Ottsville, where seven veterans of the Revolutionary War, three of the Civil War and one of the World War, were buried. It is a graveyard, but services are no longer held in the church. However, it is said that residents of the community are considering a plan for improving the condition of the burial place.

Mr. Murphy's work was authorized by an Act of 1929, later supplemented by one of 1932, calling for the location and marking of the graves, making a record of the war histories of the men, and describing the character of the headstones.

Practically all of the headstones of the Revolutionary War soldiers, the speaker said, are in excellent condition, easily legible because they were inscribed on a flint-hard type of stone—whereas many of the stones over the Civil War and other veterans are badly worn off.

Records made of the survey are kept by the County Commissioners and by the Department of Military Affairs at Harrisburg, so that they are always available.

Bucks county was the third county to get on the job and the tenth to complete the work so far as it could be done, but there are still a few incomplete records because some soldiers buried here were non-residents, and records are difficult to uncover.

Upper Bucks county, said Mr. Murphy, has more of the Revolutionary soldiers' graves than the lower part of the county below Doylestown. Hilltown has many Revolutionary graves and New Britain a large number. In several instances in lower Bucks the Revolutionary headstones have been taken off the graves and fastened to church walls, so the location of the graves is difficult to find.

The county furnishes the bronze markers now being used to replace others, and the flags, earlier the county kept a record of all soldiers buried with the $75 appropriation that is furnished for each one and those for whom gravestones were furnished at a cost of $50. This helped materially in the location of the graves.

Attention was called to the grave of Major William Kennedy, who was killed in 1785 in a fight with Doan outlaws, and of another grave at Erwinna for a man who was "killed by a bandit" while on Congressional business.

In some up-county graveyards the stones are inscribed in German and not all have been interpreted.

Graves of veterans of the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World War are marked with their individual emblems on the markers.

Marshall, the man who made the Indian Walk also is marked in a cemetery in the swamp section of Tinicum.

Mr. Murphy expressed his appreciation of the very great assistance given him by the D. A. R. and by the Legion.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Nash, Edgely, attended the annual dinner given by the Rohm & Haas Sewing Club, Sunday, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Willaman, Maple Beach.

ONE-WAY "RECIPROCITY"

(New York American, May 26, 1936)

President Roosevelt's order of a 42 per cent tariff increase on bleached, printed, dyed and colored cotton cloths imported from Japan indicates that the Administration may be beginning to see some light on the "reciprocal" (?) trade treaties that Secretary Hull has concluded to THE DETRIMENT OF AMERICAN INDUSTRIES AND THE PAY ENVELOPES OF OUR WORKING PEOPLE.

This is the end of negotiations looking to a "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan, whose only object is to flood the American market with products made at such a low price that the high level of American production could not possibly compete with them.

What President Roosevelt saw with frightened eyes in the deleterious effects of imports of cheap Japanese cotton cloths on the American textile industry is TRUE OF THE WHOLE FOREIGN TRADE POLICY OF THIS ADMINISTRATION.

"Gentlemen's agreements" and treaties made by Secretary Hull with England, France and Russia have resulted in a great decline of our exports. It has also resulted in this country becoming the DUMPING-GROUND for the pauper-paid goods of the world.

Because of these one-way treaties—made such by the "most favored nations" clause—wheat imports have jumped 117 per cent, corn imports went up 114.62 per cent and cattle imports rose 356 per cent.

This is one of the results of playing Santa Claus to all the world. It spells eventual BANKRUPTCY.

The free-trade policies of the Administration are "ploughing under" our export trade and opening our markets to Asiatic and European products, as the President at this late day begins to see.

The President has called a halt on ONLY ONE item for Japan.

But he will be compelled to go much further if this country is not to be sunk to the living level of Asiatic and European populations.

The "reciprocal" trade treaties should be abrogated, or at least amended to the point where they are really "reciprocal" and not all ANTI-AMERICAN.

DENIES ANY PART

HIS RELATIVES TESTIFY

DOYLESTOWN, May 29.—The case of Alois Moes, 50-year-old Quakertown poultry and egg dealer, charged on five bills of indictment with breaking, entering, larceny and receiving stolen goods, went to the jury yesterday after President Judge Hiram H. Keller had charged the jury following a two-day trial.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty and a motion was filed for a new trial. The Commonwealth and defense completed their cases and, before court adjourned, C. William Freed, of Quakertown, attorney for Moes, had addressed the jury, and Assistant District Attorney Edward G. Biester finished his address.

The Commonwealth produced evidence to bear out the contention that Moes started out a group of young men in the Quakertown section as chicken thieves with the bribe of "easy money," and that he purchased the stolen chickens from the boys and paid them in cash at the pound rate. The chickens stolen by the four boys, all of whom pleaded guilty last week, numbered over 600.

Moes took the witness stand and flatly denied practically every contention of the Commonwealth. He denied that he started the boys stealing and that he made them a proposition of easy money.

Before recess Wednesday, Richard Skeels, 29, one of the four who pleaded guilty in this case, said in cross-examination, "we were afraid and we knew that it was dangerous on every job we pulled."

Previously, County Detective Russo and Troopers Christ and Edwards, of the State Police, had testified that Sevellon A. Wilcox, Frank E. Wilcox, Richard Skeels and Willard E. Keller, all of whom pleaded guilty, implicated Moes as the ring-leader and head of the chicken stealing escapades.

Moes testified that he was 50 years old, married and the father of seven children, five of whom live at home. He conducts a market stall in Allentown at 33 Mulberry street, and his business is buying and selling poultry and eggs from the farmers in the upper-end section of Bucks county and from dealers in Philadelphia.

"It is not true that I accompanied Skeels and Sevellon Wilcox on February 11 and stole chickens from the farm of Reuben Strouse," Moes said. "I did not, I never went with them," he continued.

"I did not steal 30 chickens from the farm of Aaron Snyder on December 30, last year. I was in Allentown that night working to prepare for the holiday business and I remained in Allentown all the next day. My truck was also in Allentown that night and the next day." Commonwealth witnesses had previously testified that Moes

FINAL SCORE IS 2 TO 1

In one of the biggest upsets that has occurred here for quite some time, the American Legion nine nosed out the Caseys, champions of last season, 2-1, on the Landreth Ball Park last night in a Bristol Twilight League tilt. The defeat put the Caseys a full game in the rear of the league-leading Hibernians.

It was mostly the air-tight twirling of "Billy" Gallagher, Bristol high school youth, that caused the Caseys' loss. Gallagher permitted but four hits and had but one bad frame when the 1935 champs scored their only tally. Behind him his team-mates fielded like champions, playing every ball to perfection.

Opposed to Gallagher on the bill was "Milt" Jones, the ace of the Caseys' twirling staff. The "Kids" touched Jones for six safe bingles but it was an error which led to his downfall. The miscue took place in the second, Cooper erring on McGahan's roller. VanLenten sacrificed him to second and he crossed the plate when Johnny Dougherty whipped a three-bagger to center. Gallagher then won his own contest with a looping hit over second.

The Caseys attempted several rallies and each time were thwarted by wonderful catches. In the sixth both Kalenski and VanLenten came through with two catches which robbed Caseys' batters of sure hits.

STRESS SAFETY AT
BIG THEATRE MEETING1500 School Children Listen
To Speakers and See Movies

WARNED OF DANGERS

Ten little fingers; ten little toes;
None can afford to lose any.
This everyone surely knows.

This was a striking jingle given to 1500 school children assembled in a safety educational meeting here yesterday.

Public and parochial schools, Bristol police, P. R. R. Safety Department, State Highway Motor Patrol, Keystone Automobile Club and the management of the Grand Theatre joined hands in conducting an educational session in safety for the children of Bristol. There were short talks in which were cited object lessons in safety on the highways and on the railroads. There were 1500 children in attendance along with their teachers. A short moving picture was shown entitled "Why Be A Goose?"

The meeting was arranged jointly by Chief of Police Linford J. Jones of Bristol and Captain Danielson of the Pennsylvania Railroad police. Warren P. Snyder, supervising principal of the Bristol public schools, presided after the gathering had been called to order by Edward Lynn, manager of the Grand Theatre. It was one of the prime motives of the meeting to impress safety upon the minds of the children as they are about to embark upon the vacation period.

Children marched from their various school buildings under the guidance of their teachers and the Safety Patrol of the respective buildings. Bristol police directed traffic at the intersections near the theatre.

"You are assembled here this afternoon for education in safety," were the opening remarks of Manager Lynn. Mr. Lynn then presented Mr. Snyder who stated that the speakers to follow "are interested in you and your welfare and in your safety."

Lieutenant John L. McBride, Superintendent of Accident Prevention Bureau, Trenton Police Department, was the first speaker and he graphically told how an outstanding athlete in the Trenton schools had been permanently injured in an accident when he rode a bicycle while holding onto the rear of a trolley car.

"Railroad carelessness and highway safety," was the subject of Dr. A. P. Harrison, Medical Examiner of the P. R. R. Co. He cited statistics to show that 36,190 were killed last year on the highways and then he explained the dangers of railroad trespassing. "This high speed electrified line passing through here has already resulted in deaths and injuries." He cautioned all to stay off the railroad unless to travel thereon under proper guidance.

Lieutenant A. P. Dean, Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol, told the boys and girls that he was sorry to learn that the safety patrols were about to end their duties until the Fall due to the closing of the schools. He asked the children to remember that they had little brothers and sisters and to watch them and to keep them from endangering their lives on the highways. He cautioned against crossing highways, running behind parked cars, roller skating on the highways and otherwise violating the rules of safety.

Herbert J. Pascoe, Superintendent of Safety, P. R. R., explained the power of the electricity carried in the wires on the railroad. "The lowest voltage carried in any of our lines is 11,000, while the high tension wires are charged with 132,000," he said. "It only requires 2200 volts to take the life of a man who has committed murder in the State of New Jersey."

Alfred Anglada, Keystone Automobile Club, called to the platform the eight captains of the Safety Patrols in Bristol. They were given a rousing applause as were also the other members of the Safety Patrols who were requested to stand at their places.

MEMORIAL DAY

Tomorrow will be observed as Memorial Day and appropriate programs have been arranged for this community and in the nearby sections. It is the day on which fitting honor is paid to the dead and words of eulogy are spoken. None would detract from these honors. The nation owes to its patriot dead such tokens of gratitude as can be brought by the living to those who have passed beyond. To withhold these would be to prove ourselves unworthy of the progress, the gains, the achievements which their sacrifice made possible for us.

Yet, in the light of experience, what must sane human intelligence read in the rows on rows of graves of the soldier dead? They proclaim in awesome symbolism that the price war pays for whatever it buys is far too high.

These on whose graves flowers are strewn tomorrow were youths sent to their death that a great evil might be abolished. But the time has come to recognize that of all evils, war is incomparably the greatest, and that the world's youth is its priceless possession. For the world's hope for the saving of its civilization lies in the expectation that youth, saved for service, may establish the principle that there must be no more war.

All honor to the nation's heroes! Forget not the dead! But from their silent graves learn the lesson that the heroes of the future must be champions of peace; defenders of the eternal principle that there is a sacred unity in human relationships throughout the world that should prevail over petty political ambitions and jealousies and the sordid interests of those who think to profit by war.

WINNING OR LOSING?

In order to attract business, business people have to give an impression that they are winners. If they act as if they were losers, people dislike to patronize them, and they are likely to lose still more.

People judge whether a business is a winner or a loser, in part by the exterior appearance of the building in which it is located. A man may be an excellent business person, a hustler, and determined to please the public. But if he is located in a building that looks shabby or run-down, people get an unfavorable impression.

But if that building could be improved, painted if it needs it, or otherwise made to look clean and up-to-date, it will be a suggestion that that business is doing well, and is able to please and satisfy the people, and that impression will draw in trade.

Our Heroic Dead—They Have Not Died in Vain

"BLIND TO LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Young and beautiful Mary Shannon, secretary in the A. A. Keeley Steamship Company, is broken-hearted when socially prominent "Jamie" Todd, Jr., becomes engaged to Neta Gaining, one of his own set. To add to Mary's sorrow, her Aunt Willie, brooding over a prank her co-workers played on her, commits suicide. Then Mr. Shannon loses his position. Wealthy Aunt Mamie comes to the rescue with an offer to set the family up on a chicken farm in Petaluma. Mary's parents move, but she remains in Oakland because of her work. She lives at Mrs. Henry's boarding house with a friend, Margot Patterson. Mary swore she would change and did—more timidly. She was going to get a job, but she could not get a job like Margot who considered it a waste of money to pay for your own entertainment. Milton Holden, an insurance broker, bald and fat, but a good dresser, comes to the boarding house. All the girls vie for his attentions. Edwin Samson, Mary's new manager, who took Stephen Bennet's place when the latter was put in charge of the Seattle office, disapproves of his wife's friendship for Mary, fearing Mrs. Samson will meet other men through her. However, it is Mary who meets several men through Mrs. Samson. Margot warns Mary against being too chummy with Mrs. Samson and her friends, Jackson Carter and Al Pankhurst. Mary envies Margot her brains and capacity for hard work. She wishes she had a little more talent for something. The trouble was that her family and friends had spoiled her and made her think she was good. Take the music lessons, for instance; Ma thought she played with "expression," yet she never had the least bit of feeling for the piano.

CHAPTER XV

Ma never did realize that she'd been chosen to play at the school entertainments because she was a pretty little girl who could be counted on to wear a frilly white dress and look well, even if she didn't sound so well, on the platform.

And why did she get the solo parts in dancing school? Because she was a young Pavlova like Ma and Aunt Willie thought? No! Because she had a certain superficial cleverness that helped her to bluff through the steps she didn't have just right, and because Ma was one of the few mothers the teacher could count on to get row and expensive costumes for the new dances.

Same with her part in the senior play at high school. She was "leading lady" because she was popular and pretty, and the executive board pulled for her, that was all. That matter she wasn't so terribly pretty. Lots of girls were prettier than she, but they didn't know how to fix themselves up. She had always known. Even when she was too little to comb her own hair, she'd fuss with it after Ma got through, until she arranged it more becomingly.

Yes, and then she'd waked up to the realization of how selfish she'd been. . . . love had done that for her, had made her soft enough to see it. But it hadn't made her smart enough to see that she'd never be Mrs. James Todd, Jr. She'd thought that love would bridge the social gap between them, that he'd cared enough to make her his wife, whether his family liked it or not.

Well, he'd showed her. She'd lived and learned. She knew now that that was just a fairy tale. She knew that she was just one of millions, just a pretty girl, without any particular talent, or brains, or education, or social background.

What she got, she'd have to fight for. . . .

If she didn't struggle she'd be like a million other plodding office girls, working, going without this to buy that, hoping . . . getting older, less desirable . . . nothing but an occasional petting party to live up life.

Unless she had a little luck, and someone loved her again . . . if that was ever to be. . . .

And if it was, why couldn't it be

NOW? NOW, while she still ached from the pain of losing Jamie, while she was still homesick for the folks, and she was sort of experimenting, marking time, waiting for something to happen . . . why couldn't she MEET someone now? It didn't have to be a rich boy, nor a terribly handsome one. . . . She didn't mean all the things she told Margot—she wasn't just on the make!

If she could meet somebody who had some ambition, and was willing to work up. . . . She could be such a help to someone like that! Dress well, look pretty, be domestic, too. She'd always had a knack for arranging flowers, fixing up a house, and Ma said she had the makings of a good cook. Children, too, she'd even like to have a baby or two, if the right boy.

Jackson Carter had driven her home. This was the second time he had happened to pass in his big, cream-colored phaeton as she was standing on the corner waiting for the California street car. "When are you and Lalla going to drive over to Yosemite with us for the week-end? I'm beginning to think you're just spoofing us!" he had said, laughing.

Of course, she hadn't the least intention of going to Yosemite with him and Al Pankhurst, though Lalla swore it would be perfectly all right. But Lalla had done all the promoting and talking about it, and until now she hadn't thought the boys were any more serious about it than she was.

It didn't make any difference, but it was sort of exhilarating to know

"How about a little ride tonight? Full moon, made to order!" said Milton.

Yes, the right boy. . . .

There isn't any! She'd been working almost a year now. People say you meet young men in business. She certainly hadn't. She hadn't met a single, solitary man she ever LIKED, except some of the stevedore bosses and officers off the ships, and they were all married. . . . unless, of course, you counted Bonnet, left she wasn't quite dumb enough to fall for him. She'd stopped believing in Santa Claus.

Well, she'd just have to go on, as cheaply. . . .

She'd never been one of those promiscuous petters. If she stood for petting it had been because it meant something to her. But now . . . she thought about Milton Holden, holding her hand in the dark of the theater, looking proprietary at her, looking into the Bal Tabarin afterwards. . . . the very first time he took her out. . . .

Well, what did it matter? She'd had trouble enough landing him—every girl in the house trying for him, too. He'd paid for the show and the food. He had to get SOMETHING for his money!

It was Friday—fish night at Mrs. Henry's.

The odor of frying fish and cauliflower greeted her, as she turned the key in the lock, and entered the hall.

Mary usually hated fish nights, but it would have taken more than fish and cauliflower to dampen her spirits tonight.

You could go if you wanted to.

It was nice to live in a house you weren't ashamed of, too. On the outside at least there was nothing to suggest the boarding house about the Henry's place. Some terribly rich and important people had built it for a home. It must have been lovely then.

It was still lovely. Especially the hall, with the great, winding stairway, the little leaded-glass windows, the gleaming parquet floors.

She whistled a little, just because she was happy, as she walked up the stairway, leisurely, thinking about Yosemite that she'd never seen.

Milton Holden must have heard her, for he came out of his room, which was at the head of the second floor landing, tying a gorgeous garnet silk dressing gown as he came.

"How about a little ride tonight?"

Full moon, made to order! A minute ago she'd have jumped at the idea, but now that it was presented to her, she didn't want it.

"Oh, I'd love to, but I've got to do some washing and ironing tonight. See you at dinner!" she said, and hurried on up the stairs.

"He's got a heck of a nerve," Margot said. "What does he think he is, Romeo? Why should you want to look at a moon with him? Let the Fricks have him, if that's his style. Well, you live and learn every day. I took him for a spender!"

STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER—Eighth and Market Streets—Philadelphia

State Refuses To Repair State Road Despite Plea

to Croydon. The nearest point at which Croydon residents can board a bus for Philadelphia or Bristol and intermediate points is Bristol Pike.

WHEREFORE we have set our signatures to this petition and request that the said State Road be immediately improved.

In a letter directed to Richard Gosline, Bristol Park, the management of the Neibauer Bus Company outlined that company's position in regard to operating buses over State Road and stated why the bus service was discontinued.

The letter follows:

April 25, 1936

Mr. Richard Gosline,
R. D. No. 2, Bristol Park,
Bristol, Penna.

Dear Sir:

You have asked us to join in the movement which has been initiated among the residents of Croydon, Bucks County, Pa., for the resurfacing or rebuilding of Upper State Road between Bristol and Croydon. This we are glad to do. We have read the petition which you propose to present to the Pennsylvania Secretary of Highways and subscribe to all of the statements which it contains.

As you doubtless know Neibauer Bus Company holds a Certificate of Public Convenience to operate between Philadelphia County line at Bristol Pike and the Pennsylvania State Line at Morrisville with the right to send buses into Croydon by Upper State Road. From commencement of operation of our franchise in September, 1935, until February, 1936, buses were run over Upper State Road into Croydon.

At the latter date weather conditions made the road absolutely impassable for bus travel. During the period preceding that the road was in such state of general disrepair that it could only be traversed in a very cautious manner and even then jolted passengers to a dangerous degree and caused unprecedented breakage of equipment.

After the Spring thaw Upper State Road was so full of holes and ruts as to resemble the shell torn roads of a war devastated area. And it is now in that condition. Obviously it is not accessible for bus travel.

The means of ingress and egress to and from Croydon are so limited that passengers who now travel on our line—about a mile from Croydon on the Bristol Pike—have endeavored to save time and distance by crossing the tracks of the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. That road bed is between Bristol Pike and Croydon. The result has been at least the one death which occurred within the last month.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is likewise cognizant of the danger as is evidenced by its letter, of which a copy is attached.

We are desirous of co-operating with the people of Croydon and anxious to serve them even if the operation of buses into their section must be accomplished at a loss to the company. This is evidenced by our service between September, 1935 and February, 1936 over Upper State Road which was then in terrible condition.

We do not have to justify our cessation of that operation to you and the people of Croydon who, without exception, agree to the impossibility of operating passenger vehicles over that road.

Our buses will again run into your community the day repairs on Upper State Road are completed.

Very truly yours,
NEIBAUER BUS COMPANY,
Mrs. E. Neibauer.

The danger involved in the habit of the residents of Croydon and Bristol Park, the two isolated sections, who frequently cross the high speed line of the P. R. R. in order to reach the buses operating on the Bristol Pike, is causing considerable apprehension on the part of the P. R. R.

The Neibauer Company has been requested to stop their buses above Elm avenue, so that trespassing will be discouraged as much as possible. The P. R. R. wrote: "We have been endeavoring to discourage trespassing on our Railroad. Our study of conditions develops that your buses are stopping at Elm avenue, Bristol Park, Pa., east of Croydon. Passengers alighting from your buses are seen to cross our tracks.

"May we suggest that you arrange to stop your buses about one hundred yards west of Elm avenue where an overhead bridge has been provided? The interests of all would be better served and trespassing discouraged.

"May we respectfully ask your co-operation in this matter in the interest of public safety?"

"Yours truly,
"D. Y. GEDDES."

Commander Harry Wilcox announced an effort will be made to have a large turnout of former service men in the parade which will be held in the morning. Every former service man, whether he is a member of the Legion or not, is urged to march. Wilcox said that although many of the men no longer have uniforms, they should take part.

CRASH MARKS OPENING OF 3-DAY RACE MEET

LANGHORNE, May 29—A crash marked the first of a 3-day race meet opening here yesterday.

The crash occurred in the second heat of the 2:14 trot. Guy the Tramp, owned and driven by W. C. Crummer, of Pinehurst, N. C., broke off the trot rounding the north turn on the first lap. Crummer pulled his horse up sharply and Tondonella Stout, owned by I. W. Gleason, of Williamsport, Pa., and driven by William Bull, which was running almost behind Guy the Tramp, was unable to swerve in time to avoid a collision.

Tondonella Stout put his left forefoot through the right wheel of Crummer's sulky, and horse and both sulkeys rolled over. Guy the Tramp broke free of his traces and galloped around the track, eventually crossing the finish line ahead of the field. Both drivers were pitched out onto the track, Crummer sustaining severe lacerations of the forehead and cheek, while Bull escaped unhurt. Crummer was treated at the scene by Dr. Robert M. Miller, of Hopewell, and was removed to the residence of Gage B. Ellis, owner of the Village Farm.

ANDRETH NINE TIES WITH PALMYRA TEAM

The Landreth nine played a 9 to 9 tie with Palmyra last night in a twilight game on the Jersey field.

The "Farmers" arrived late for the game and started without fielding practice and with Sullivan pitching. Sullivan was given miserable support, Paul relieved Sullivan in the fourth inning.

What the Landreths lacked in fielding they atoned for at bat. They made ten hits, six being for extra bases. "Spunk" Pitko made a near homer in the fifth, a triple which just missed by inches going over the centre field fence. Hibbs had two two-base hits.

Paul led off the sixth inning with a triple to left field.

Cold hampered the players of both teams. The weather was more suitable for football.

Denies Any Part In Chicken Stealing

truck was in his garage in Quakertown the night of December 30.

"I did not go to the farm of William Sames, Richland township, on February 22, in my truck, with the boys, to steal chickens," Moes continued. "I certainly did not go to the farm of Frank Sites and steal 35 chickens and I did not take part in the theft of chickens on March 9 from the farm of Mrs. Louise March, Milford township."

"Skees testified that he met you in church on Dec. 15, last year, and that you handed him a note asking him, and Sevellon A. Wilcox, to come and see him at the Quakertown railroad station, is that true?" Attorney Freed asked Moes.

"It certainly is not true," Moes replied. "I never gave him a note and never made any arrangements with him of any kind," he added. "I did not know the boys were out stealing chickens and I, personally, never stole a chicken; it would be the last thing that I would ever do. Steal chickens!"

"When the State Police came to my house at 4 o'clock in the morning to arrest me, they knocked at the door and I went downstairs after they said 'State Police, come down and go with us, you chicken thief, we have been trailing you for months.'"

Moes also testified that on the night of February 29, when the Commonwealth witnesses charged that he was stealing chickens with Quakertown boys, he was home where he and his wife were getting ready to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

"No, sir, I never at any time was out with Skees or Wilcox," Moes said in answer to another question.

Under cross-examination conducted by Assistant District Attorney Blester, Moes admitted that he did buy some chickens on three occasions since January 1, from Skees and Wilcox, and that he paid them the market price for them. He denied that he had any special arrangement with them as to the price and denied that he sold them for so much a pound and then split three ways with Skees and Wilcox.

"I never questioned the boys as to where they got the few chickens I bought from them," Moes continued.

Moes said before leaving the witness stand that the police told him if he pleaded guilty he might get off with 15 years. He also flatly denied that he was expelled from an Allentown market because of any violations of rules he committed there, which the Commonwealth charged was for "selling bad chickens."

Ruth Thier, of Allentown, a clerk who worked for Moes in his market stall for several years, testified that Moes was on the job in Allentown on December 30, the night a Commonwealth witness testified that he was stealing chickens in Bucks county. Mrs. Thier testified that Moes was in Allentown all night and slept in the same room with her sons, and that the next day Mrs. Moes came to Allentown and worked with him.

Joseph Kelly, of Haycock township, son-in-law of Moes, testified that he was at the wedding anniversary party on February 29 and that he was still at the Moes house when Moes went to bed that night. Others at the same party, Malachi and Mrs. Martha Kelly, Dora, Frances, Helen and Emma Moes, all testified the same.

That he was in Philadelphia with Moes buying chickens on May 15, this year, was the testimony of W. B. Shull, of Quakertown. Shull said that Moes reputation for honesty had always been very good.

Charles Bleam, of Quakertown, who has known Moes for two and one-half years, said that he has always been honest. Bruno Miller, of Lower Milford township, Lehigh county, told the Court that he knew Moes 23 years ago in Kentucky and for several years in Pennsylvania and always found him to be honest.

The defendant's wife, Mrs. Dora Moes, testified that her husband was never out late at night. She denied that Skees or Wilcox had come to her home to see her husband.

Lawrence Fry, Allentown butcher, highly praised Moes' reputation for honesty in Allentown.

As a rebuttal witness the Commonwealth then called Willard W. Keller, 17, Quakertown candy store clerk, who pleaded guilty to chicken stealing last week. He said that on Wednesday, May 13, he was in Moes' barn, in Skees' presence, and at that time Moes asked him if he wanted to steal chickens and make some easy money, about $5 a night. Keller said that he went to the barn with Skees, who wanted to collect some money that was due him. He said that he saw Mrs. Moes at the house and personally asked her if he could speak with her husband, and that she then summoned her husband to the barn.

Another Commonwealth rebuttal witness was Arthur Wilcox, father of Sevellon and Frank Wilcox.

"About three weeks ago in the North Penn Restaurant in Quakertown," the elder Wilcox testified, "I met Moes and my boy was standing next to him. I called Moes aside and told him that I was suspicious about my boy who had been staying out late at night. Moes then told me that he could assure me that my boys were doing nothing wrong. Moes refused to state anything about chicken stealing."

Attorney Freed then called Mrs. Moes in sur-rebuttal for the defense and the defendant's wife again denied that she answered the door for the Keller boy on May 15 this year.

The Commonwealth was then granted leave to call another witness in rebuttal and Sevellon Wilcox, one of the defendants who pleaded guilty, was called to the stand. Wilcox stated that a piece of paper bearing figures, and offered in evidence by the Commonwealth during the trial, was a price list that he personally received from Moes one day in Allentown. The figures on the piece of paper, Wilcox said, were the prices that the boys were to receive in the future for stealing chickens.

Moes and his wife, both testified that the piece of paper had been taken from their barn, and that it was for the guidance of Mrs. Moes when she was left alone to buy chickens.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Freed dwelt at length on what he termed the danger of convicting a man on the testimony of self-confessed criminals who are now awaiting sentence in this Court.

Tullytown School Has 10 Pupils To Graduate

Clara Lavenberg, Betty Bachofer, Ruth Bachofer, Mary Doto, Lottie Termyna, Rose Luciano, Viola Schaffer, Jilia Spangler, Doris Nelson and Dorothy Palek with music by the harmonica band.

The class poem, "If," was given by Sedeo Monti; "To A Water Fowl," Lucy Silvi; "Song of the Chattanooga"; Rose Di Ciccio; essay, "Theodore Roosevelt," William Lynch, valedictorian. Before the address of assistant superintendent Charles Boehm, Morrisville, the girls' chorus sang "There Is Love and Success To You."

Mr. Boehm commended the teachers on the exercises, and paid special tribute to principal George Itterly who leaves Tullytown school this year after seven years of service. "Mr. Itterly," he said, "ranks among the best principals of Bucks County." Mr. Boehm dwelt upon the life of John Fitch, who settled in Bucks County and here worked on his steamboat. He told of Fitch's many trials and tribulations, and how no matter what failures and hardships he had, never gave up. He then presented the diplomas to the graduates: Lucy Silvi, Helen Schaffer, Rose DiCicco, Florence Doto, Mary Marcucci, William Lynch, Joseph Lovett, Richard Cook, William Abute and Sedeo Monti.

The American Legion medals, given by Robert Bracken Post, No. 382, and the Auxiliary were presented by Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg to Lucy Silvi; and by Percy G. Ford to Sedeo Monti.

After the song, "Pennsylvania," the benediction was pronounced by Rev. MacConaghy.

Primo Chopped Down Again

Primo Carnera, a battered hulk, limped to the ropes in the 9th round of his Brooklyn bout with LeRoy Haynes (in background) as Referee Arthur Donovan stood with his hand upraised to stop the fight. Temporary paralysis of "Da Preem's" left leg caused the big Italian to say "Nough" and the verdict on the record became a technical knockout for Haynes.
